

1. I want to name my website "The Waterfowl Hunting Guide"
2. I want to make a guide for all of the waterfowl hunters in South Carolina. It would contain all of the information a waterfowl hunter would need. It would have links to buy licenses and contain the information on seasons. It would also have current news about the hunting season and another page with maybe a discussion board. Also a page to keep track of your hunts and all the different species you got this season.
3. My page names would be as follows: Species(will describe the waterfowl species in south carolina), Hunting Licenses(have all the information about the different licenses required in south carolina and where to buy them), Public Hunting Land(list of all the public hunting land in south carolina and what species are there), My Hunt(post pictures of your hunt and store your memories), and News(current news in the world of waterfowl hunting) .
4. My page will store some information about the different types of waterfowl and season information that only the admin will be able to edit so the site is accurate. Users can create personal hunt logs where each entry will have a location, picture, and comments. Users can see and edit their entries. Anyone can read the information on the page without an account but an account will be required to make entries on the My Hunt section. Photos will be stored as image files and a database will be what keeps the text and links for those images. Admin will be the only people aloud to post news and updates on species and season details.
